

around suspended object

designer: karen gilbert + paul pavlak

A hanging kinetic sculpture, around is composed of glass spheres of various sizes hung on a series of steel arms emanating from a central steel core. The steel arms rotate, allowing the individual arms to move and be adjusted. A perfect accent for large, high-ceilinged spaces. Each piece comes with four hooked rods, 14" each, for a total suspended length of up to 56" - additional hooks can be ordered, please inquire.

beech vessel

beech is a series of heavy clear crystal vessels, named for the sturdy beechwood tools used by the glassblowers to create the multiple organic voids and openings on each piece. Handmade by glassmasters in the Czech Republic specializing in extremely thick glass forms, each piece is slightly different, no two the same. The vases are available in two versions: "large holes" with larger irregular openings and voids, "small holes" with finer more regular openings and voids. The bowl is a heavy solid pillow of clear Czech crystal covered in a series of random organic voids. Sculptural objects in their own right, beech are also completely functional crystal vases, lending themselves to extremely unique and creative uses and arrangements.

Brace functions beautifully as a tabletop platter or centerpiece. Since the piece is a continuous tube, it has a hole in the center that makes it inappropriate for wet arrangements or holding liquids of any kind, but as a centerpiece brace presents itself as a seductive vortex of glass atop a flaring base, with the color concentrated at the base and fading to clear crystal at the edges. Suitable as a stand-alone sculptural object, or as a platform for decorative flourishes.

coho object

designer: karen gilbert + paul pavlak

An impressive sculptural piece, our SkLO coho object reduces the idea of "fish" to an abstract simple minimum. rendered monumentally in thick, expressive handblown Czech glass - a simple palette of two overlapping colors creates a rich duality. The "mouth" of the piece is an expression of the glassblowing process, featuring a signature SkLO detail - the piece is broken from the pipe and fire polished to create further subtle expression. Handblown, no two exactly alike. Available with either a custom steel museum stand for table and shelf display, or custom wall hooks for wall presentation. All steel in standard SkLO black patina.

coil object

designer: karen gilbert + paul pavlak

Coil is an object whose design showcases the inimitable clarity and thickness of Czech glass crystal. Sold individually, in intertwinable groups of three, coil embodies the ability of glassblowing to capture the kinetic moment in time. They are made by blowing and stretching a long crystal tube, then wrapping that tube around a form made out of a section of log. Finally, the glassmaster shapes, stretches and pulls each one into the final unique shape.

float vessel

designer: karen gilbert + paul pavlak

Designed to mix and match color palettes as well as sizes, the float series can, by its nature, be a custom designed art piece. Whether it is a small vignette, or a large installation, these pieces create a relationship to one another and glow in any space they inhabit. They are double-dipped into the molten glass to create the slight ripple near the top, then broken off the pipe and torch polished to create the opening. It is subtle details like these that make each float a unique, one-of-a-kind piece in itself.

wrap vase vessel

designer: karen gilbert + paul pavlak

A continuous glass tube that finishes as a vessel, the wrap vase comes in a flexible palette of colors, offering opportunities to display in single or in multiples within any color scheme. The thick polished top highlights the best of Czech glassblowing - mass, clarity, and perfect depth of color.

note - as the vessel is a continuous tube throughout, we cannot recommend filling with liquid
